QUERIES.

1. IS it not extremely probable (not to ſay abſolutely certain) from the infinite perfections of God in general, and from his divine goodneſs in particular, that he never has made, and never will make a rational creature, or Being, that has it not one time or other, really, and actually in its power to be compleatly happy for ever?

2. Is it not very probable, that there is no ſalvation prepared for the fallen angels, not only becauſe they ſinned firſt, and without any tempter but themſelves; but alſo, becauſe they tempted man, and brought him to a grevious Fall, and thus rendered themſelves doubly guilty, and obnoxious?

3. Is it not reaſonable to ſuppoſe, that as man fell by the extremely ſubtil, and ſtrong temptations of Satan, and that, as all mankind are involved in miſery by Adam's fall, that therefore God procured ſalvation for all mankind, on the conditions of faith and repentance?

4. Is not the atonement made by Chriſt, infinite, and ſufficient for the ſins of the whole world, or for all mankind, without exception?

5. Does not the death of Chriſt, if intended for all mankind, or for every individual man without exception, give a grander and more glorious diſplay of all the attributes and perfections of the deity, than if intended only for part, yea! the ſmalleſt part of the world of mankind?

6. And did not God actually intend and deſign, to give the higheſt, grandeſt and moſt glorious diſplay of all his endleſs attributes and divine perfections, to the whole world of all intelligent Beings, by the gift of his own dear ſon?

7. If ſo, what reaſon can there be to ſuppoſe, that Chriſt did not actually die for the ſins of the whole world, eſpecially ſince God is good to all, as the Pſalmiſt ſpeeks, and is no reſpecter of perſons?

8. Is it poſſible, that a moſt holy God ſhould really will, or which is the very ſame thing, decree, that ſome people, or ſome men ſhould not believe, nor repent, not be holy, while they live here on earth, in a ſtate of trial and probation?

9. Does not God neceſſarily and eternally love righteouſneſs, and hate iniquity in all men?

10. Is not the infinite and perfect eternity of the deity eſſentially and infinitely different from all time, and from all ſucceſſion of the parts of time?

11. If the eternity of God is an infinite thing, or attribute of God, and therefore abſolutely incomprehenſible to all finite Beings, how can we infer any thing from it, as from a datum, or premiſe, with regard to what God does in time?

12. Can a concluſion be known to be certain and true, when the premiſſes are abſolutely unknown?

13. If God wills and decrees to damn a man at the time of his death, after he has paſſed through a time and ſtate of trial and probation, does he not as much will and decree it from eternity, as if he had willed and decreed it before the the man had ſin, or even an exiſtence, or even before the foundation of the world?

15. Why ſhould we ſuppoſe God to be under a neceſſity to will and decree a man to be damned, before he commits ſin?

15. Cannot God will, decree, elect, and reprobate when he pleaſes, and when it is beſt and moſt wiſe to do ſo; and can he not forbear to act when he pleaſes, when it is beſt and wiſeſt to forbear?

16. Was there any time before the creation of the Univerſe?

17. Is not God always equally eternal?

18. Is one act of God more eternal or leſs eternal than another act of God, even though one was done a thouſand years before the other?

19. If God cannot be ſaid to will to puniſh ſin before it is committed; how can he be ſaid to decree to puniſh ſin before it is committed; ſince it is moſt certain, that the will of God is the decree of God, or ſince the will and decree of God, are one and the very ſelf ſame thing?

20. When does God will and decree to puniſh ſin, before or after it exiſts?

21. If God does not hate a man before he ſins, why ſhould we ſuppoſe that God wills, or which is the ſame thing, decree to puniſh him?

22. Can any thing be the object of preſcience; or can any thing be foreſeen, that is never to exiſt?

23. Can the future exiſtence of any thing be certainly foreſeen, if it is not certainly decreed to be future?

24. If an event is not to be moſt certainly future, how can it be certainly foreknown that it will be future?

25. Can an abſolutely uncertain and unfixed event be certainly foreſeen, or foreknown by the moſt perfect underſtanding?

26. If the divine decree of predeſtination be abſolute, or unconditional, can men be ſaid to be in a time and ſtate of trial and probation in this life?

27. Can any thing be the object either of love or hatred, before it exiſts?

28. If men are decreed to be happy or miſerable, antecedently to their exiſtence, will it not follow unavoidably that a non-entity, a mere nullity, or abſolute nothing is decreed to be damned; ſince men are mere nothing antecedently to their exiſtence?

29. What relation can the divine will, or decree, or any other thing have to mere nothing, or a mere nullity, and utter emptineſs?

30. Is it reaſonable, or even poſſible to ſuppoſe, that a man can offend God by ſin, before the man exiſts, and ſins?

31. Is it not exceſſively abſurd to ſuppoſe, that the infinite ſovereignty, and perfect impartiality of the Godhead, ſhould claſh or interfere with one another?

32. Are not the impartiality, univerſal benevolence, and even the ſovereignty of God, more illuſtriouſly diſplayed by the death of Chriſt, if the fruits of it are actually intended for all men, than if they were only deſigned for the ſmalleſt part of mankind?

Comparative View of the CHINESE and BRITISH Conduct in Life.

THE Chineſe exceed all other nations of the world, in the truth of antiquity of the hiſtory of their immenſe Empire, having for more than 4000 years joined the hiſtory of the heavens to that of the earth, confirming the one by the other. Their Empire, at this day, is the largeſt, moſt populous, rich, and antient in the world; and paternal authority, which there is never infringed, and on which their conſtitution is founded, makes them as it were one vaſt family, over which the Emperor preſides as common father. They pay a ſacred regard to the laws, cuſtoms, and manners of their anceſtors, which have continued the ſame for upwards of four thouſand centuries, by which they remain impenetrable to the taint of novelty, and that looſe and wanton effeminacy of dreſs, and luxury of manners, which have of late ſo infected the minds and morals of the Europeans. In this Empire, the garden and paradiſe of the globe, virtue and merit are continually rewarded and encouraged; and vice and immorality as conſtantly reproved and puniſhed. This is a practice worthy the imitation of all nations and communities, and the ſureſt way to make their virtues famous, and their glory unſullied and immortal. In every ſtate or country, the firſt great objects of the laws ought to be the reward of virtue, and correction of vice; and ſuch laws ſhould be ſimple, uniform, and conciſe, free from thoſe intricacies and perplexities with which the laws of Britain unhappily abound. The puniſhment of vice alone is not ſufficient to ſtir up a virtuous emulation in us, to the purſuit and practice of goodneſs, and noble actions; but the reward and encouragement of merit and virtue ſhould be carefully attended to; and no rare and worthy action ſhould be ſuffered to ſink in oblivion, or paſs unnoticed, however obſcure may be the author. How often in our military departments, do we ſee young ignorant boys in commiſſion by purchaſe, placed, and exerciſing their authority over the brave, honeſt, experienced veteran, who hath ſpent the beſt of his blood, and time in the ſervice of his King and country; and is now rewarded with the rebuke of a babe, or empty coxcomb, againſt whom his manly ſoul dare not rebel, or expreſs his indignation thereat. In church and ſtate, we daily ſee places, benefits, honours and dignities, confered without any regard to merit, learning, or even common honeſty: Money and intereſt is the only recommendation that is paid any reſpect to, and be the candidate ever ſo learned, virtuous, or excellent, without one of theſe, he ſtands but little chance for advancement, unleſs by the power or interpoſition of a miracle.

Though we may in ſome of the arts and ſciences boaſt a ſuperiority over the Chineſe, yet in a conſtant regard to the encouragement of virtue, we muſt yeild them the palm: In filial piety, and ſocial endearments, they excell us, as well as in the ſtudy and practice of morality. This happy people live in a country, productive of all the richeſt and choiceſt bounties of nature, even to exceſs; and yet they are far more temperate than we, never indulging in the uſe of rich wines, or ſtrong liquors, which impair the conſtitution, weaken the underſtanding, and degrade human nature; the drunkard being both unfit for ſociety, and the diſcharge of the religious and other neceſſary duties of life; a burthen to himſelf, and a ſhock to decency and good manners. The Chineſe adore and worſhip one God, and were never known to cut one another's throats about matters of religion, or thoſe ceremonious inventions of Prieſts, Monks, and Friars, &c. &c. on whoſe account Europe has ſo often been deluged with blood, to the eternal diſgrace of all concerned therein. In hiſtory they ſurpaſs us, we having none of our own country, but what are tainted with party, prejudice or faction, and very often with all. Though they knew the uſe of the magnet long before us, they fail not to ſtrange and diſtant countries, to invade and plunder the natives of their property, murder or make them captives, contrary to common juſtice and humanity; but, content with what their country affords, they seek no more, living in constant rest and happiness: And though the vices or errors incident to human nature are found among them, nevertheless, their laws do not authorise the robbing, murdering, or plundering those people who never did them harm, nor to whose goods they have any claim, either of a legal, or equitable nature. We are proud of copying those vices and manners of the Romans, by which their mighty Empire, founded on blood and rapine, was overthrown and annihilated; but neglect those virtues, and bright examples, by which alone it so long subsisted and flourished, and by which the Chinese have for thousands of ages been increasing in population, strength, riches, and happiness. We dream that we are a free, mighty, and respectable people; but, in reality, the shadow of greatness is all that remains, and a declension feeds on our vitals, while we loll in the lap of security, and soon or late will leave us a prey to those who with eager eyes are watching our downfall. Which God avert.

From the BOSTON GAZETTE, of August 31.

BY the last post from New-York, we learn the H——— of C———s have passed a B—l for suspending the legislative authority of that province, until they comply with the billeting act: or in other words, they have taken away their legislative authority, because N. Y. would not give it up themselves, and by complying with that act, acknowlege the p——t had a right to legislate for them. What the event of this step will be, I know not; but this I am sure of, nothing can more affect the liberty of the colonies than such a step, but a compliance with the act itself. If our legislative authority can be suspended whenever we refuse obedience to laws we never consented to, we may as well send home our representatives, and acknowlege ourselves slaves; for a parliament can be of no use to a people who are subject to laws they do not make. It is but an illusion without any benefit, an ignus fatuus, which may seduce us to our ruin. The people in this province will, I doubt not, look on this measure in the same light they would, were they the objects of it; for nothing is more certain, than as free colonies we must rise and fall together. In the late troubles, for want of experience, many faults, and some gross errors were committed, from which I hope we have gained knowlege. Tumult and disorder should be carefully avoided, especially as we have lawful and laudable means in our hands of obtaining redress, which must speedily and effectually relieve us, if we will but act as becomes Americans, with one voice and one mind.—Let us unanimously agree to confine our imports from E———d and S———d, to such articles as are absolutely necessary to carry on our fisheries, and provide us against the inclemency of the seasons, and we have nothing to fear. The efficacy of this expedient we have once before experienced, and it will certainly operate for our relief again; for nothing pleads more persuasively than interest with a trading nation—By this measure we shall avoid every thing blameworthy, introduce a spirit of frugality, enrich ourselves, convince our enemies of our resolution and wisdom—and in the end certainly bring about that redress we all desire, and which every good subject ultimately aims at—I cannot think so hard of Americans as to imagine there can be any difficulty in effecting such a measure; but should there be found among us some, who are so lost to all sense of liberty, and so depraved as to suffer their private interest to come in competition with the public, I am persuaded that the number will be so small, that shame and contempt may bring them to a just sense of their duty without having recourse to the passion of fear—Let us rise then with one voice, and declare like true Englishmen, we abhor slavery, and such as would enslave us; we love liberty, and her friends; and that we will encourage the one, and depress the other by all justifiable means in our power—Let us call upon our sister colonies to join with us in so glorious a work; let no man think his influence too small, to assist in it; but let every one use his best endeavours to render it universal. Then shall we obtain our wishes, and put to shame our enemies, who would gladly see us run into mad disorder and wild confusion at this critical juncture—Let us pursue steadily this point, without giving heed to their promises or threats, which are designed to lead us into error, and in the end destroy us. Tho' the press, that sure and grand support of liberty and right, should be threatened with the summary proceedings of the Star-Chamber, and our righteous opposition to slavery be called rebellion, yet will a true Englishman pursue his duty with firmness, and leave the event to Heaven.

ROSEAU, (in Dominica) AUGUST 8.

WE hear that a large ship bound from Barbados to London, and two other vessels, were overset by a violent squall of wind, on the evening of Monday the 27th of last month.

We also hear, that on Saturday the 4th of July, there was tried in a Court of Exchequer, holden at St. George's-Town, in the island of Grenada, a cause brought at the suit of his Majesty, against the Hon. William Lindow, Esq; and others, for the non-payment of the capitation tax; when after many very learned arguments by the council on both sides, a decision was given in favour of the crown. It may be necessary to observe, that this capitation tax was laid on the inhabitants of Grenada, by virtue of his Majesty's LETTERS PATENT, dated at Westminster, the 20th day of July 1764, which direct, that the poll-tax paid by the inhabitants of that island while it was under the subjection of his most Christian Majesty, should now be levied, collected and paid in the same manner and form as it then was, and that it should be continued during the King's pleasure.

AUGUST 15. The vessel said to have been overset on the evening of the 27th of July, from Barbados, bound to London, is now imagined to be the ship Nancy, Captain Ross Stewart, from Barbados, bound to Milford-Haven and Dublin.

SAVANNAH, (in Georgia) SEPTEMBER 30.

Extract of a Letter from the Parish of St. Andrew, dated July 25, 1767.

"This sudden alarm of the Indians having killed a number of white people upon St. Mary's, has put us in the utmost consternation. All the people to the southward of us have left their plantations, and fled to the islands. How soon we may be obliged to do the same, I cannot say, but I am afraid it will not be long, unless we get some assistance, or hear some better accounts than those we have received lately, and which you have no doubt heard of. I would fain hope the murders were committed by a party of the Indians who were severely whipped there this spring, as the people who whipt them (Mills's family) are particularly mentioned to have been killed, but still I think they have done it too deliberately, as it happened soon after the Busk. What the consequence will be, God only knows."

OCTOBER 7. A gentleman from the Southward has given us the following as a true and particular account of the murders committed by the Indians at St. Mary's, viz. Jeremiah Wilder, Benjamin Baker, George Mills, and one Cummings, a little distance from Wilder's house, were fired upon by six Indians, who wounded all of them but Mills, who escaped unhurt to the house of William Mills, his brother, living about fifty miles further down the river. Old Mills, father to Mrs. Wilder, being at the house, and hearing the firing, desired her to fly with her child, but she not chusing to go off till she knew the fate of her husband, the old man with the child, escaped to the house of his son William Mills, where he met with his other son who had got off from the Indians. A small party soon went up the river in search of Wilder, his wife, and the other two men, and going to the place where they had been attacked, they found Mrs. Wilder attending her husband, who it is thought will recover, and Baker and Cummings dead of their wounds. The murderers, we are told, belonged to a gang of about thirty villains who have been driven from the Creek nation for some misdemeanors: the names of the principal of them are, Saucy-Jack, Bob, and Peter; the whipping of the first, it is thought, gave rise to the outrage committed by these Indians. We do not hear of their having done any more mischief, except plundering the house of James Lemmon, who kept the ferry at Sittille.

Joseph Claypole, master of the sloop Sukey, left Philadelphia the 6th of September last, and on the 15th, in lat. 36° long. 74: 24, lost his mast in a hard gale of wind. Same day he fell in with his Majesty's sloop the Hornet, Capt. Morgan, who towed the sloop into Ocracock, supplied her with provisions, rigging, and other necessaries, and assisted him in getting in a new mast.

CHARLES-TOWN, OCTOBER 20.

MR. Job Elliott, living at the Saltketcher, has brought to Goal one MOON, Chief of the Villains who have done so much Damage in the back Parts of this Province, and whose Name has struck such Horror into the Minds of his Majesty's Subjects: Mr. Elliott met with him accidentally, a considerable Distance from Home, and having some Remembrance of him when a Boy, decoyed him to a convenient Place, and then secured him, agreeable to the Governor's Proclamation; and without any Assistance, or other Authority, brought him safe to Charles-Town Goal, where he is now lodged; and it is hoped, the numerous Robberies and Outrages, it is said he has been guilty of, will be known to some of the many Persons who will be attendant at the ensuing Sessions, so that there may be no want of Evidence to bring him to his deserved Punishment. Said Moon is own Brother to one of the same Name, and half Brother to one Black, who was executed about three Sessions ago.——He had in his Possession when taken, a brown bay Horse, which is now in Custody of Mr. Elliott, and herhaps may be the Property of some other Person.

At a full Board of Commissioners for building the new Exchange and Custom-House, the Proposals of Messrs. Peter and John Horlbeck were prefered; and at the same Time agreed with for finishing the same, by the beginning of the Year 1770, for 40,936l. And the new Watch-House, (already begun) to be compleated by the first of August next, by Messrs. Nailor and Brown, for 5,500l. As also the Stone Bridge, at the North End of the Bay, for 3,200l. by Messrs. Crosby and Toomer.

The Inhabitants on the South-west Frontiers of this Province towards Saluda and Horse-Creek, having lately increased greatly, his Excellency the Governor has been pleased to form them into a new Regiment of Militia, and to appoint John Lewis Gervais, Esq; Colonel, Thomas Bell, Esq; Lieut. Colonel, and James Mayson, Esq; Major, thereof.

We hear from Georgia, that Mr. Stuart, Superintendant of Indian Affairs, and Governor Grant, were shortly to meet at East-Florida, to settle Matters of Importance with the Creek Indians.

His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to appoint Joseph Jenkins, jun. Esq; Naval Officer and Searcher for the Port of Beaufort, Port-Royal.

Yesterday the Court of General-Sessions, Oyer and Terminer, Assize, and General Goal Delivery, began to be holden according to an Act of the General Assembly of this Province, passed the 18th of April last, for altering the Times of holding the said Court of General-Sessions, &c.

His Excellency Governor Wright, of Georgia, having received his Majesty's Commands to lay some weighty and important Matters before the General Assembly of the said Province, his Excellency issued a Proclamation on the 29th of September, ordering them to meet on Monday the 26th Instant, for the Dispatch of Business.

Last Saturday Morning, the Snow Aurora, Captain Patterson, bound from Jamaica for London, who lately put in here in Distress, was drove by a hard Gale of Wind from Rebellion-Road upon the Lower-Middle, near Fort-Johnson, but happily beat over and got upon a Mud-Bank near James-Island, without receiving any great Damage: She is now taking out some of her Cargo, in order to come up to Town for Repairs.

On the 12th Instant died, Dr. WILLIAM PILLANS, a Gentleman universally known through the Province, much esteemed in his Profession, and greatly beloved in his private Character.—Through an open Countenance could be seen that generous and honest Heart with which he was blessed, and in which no Man was deceived.—The Rich has lost a Doctor who did much for little—the Poor and Needy, a Friend indeed.—No Man had more Friends, and fewer Enemies; therefore his Death is universally regretted.

MARRIED.] Mr. John Baker, Merchant, to Miss Amy Legare, Daughter of Mr. Thomas Legare.

ELEGY,

On the Reverend Mr. WILTON.

ADIEU thou worthy Man, tho' wont to please,
And calm the Soul with inward Woe oppress:
Tho' form'd the smart of piercing Grief to ease;
And sooth the Mind disconsolate to rest.

WILTON! the good, the generous, and wise,
From all the glitt'ring Pomp of Life is fled!
Patient he clos'd in Death his peaceful Eyes:
Suddenly fell, and mingled with the Dead.

His Soul was great, benevolent, and kind,
Of others Grief he shar'd a friendly Part;
His vast Munificence was unconfin'd,
His liberal Hand display'd a gen'rous Heart.

Encircl'd round his hospitable Door
With thankful Hearts and with uplifted Eyes;
Fed by his Bounty stood the grateful Poor,
While for his Life to Heav'n their Prayers rise.

But now, alas! their Cheeks bedew'd with Tears,
And streaming Eyes the woeful Loss deplore!
In each sad Face Anxiety appears;
Their Joy is gone, for WILTON is no more.
